SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER AND CHRONICLE EDITORIAL PROFILE

Both the Examiner and the Chronicle are conservative papers and strong supporters of the CIA. The Examiner editorials have been more verbal and forthright about CIA support than the Chronicle. In February 1976, the Examiner (a Hearst newspaper) carried a very supportive editorial by Editor-in-Chief William Randolph Hearst, Jr., and described the CIA as "our super-fine intelligence agency, the best in the world...." In April of this year, the Chronicle was pleased with Admiral Turner's new and more open look at the Agency's information-sharing policy, such as releasing publications to the general public. The editorial called these actions "constructive and overdue."
